COMMERCIAL INTELLIGENCE. HONGKONG, MONDAY LYENING. There has been but little fluctuation in the drug market for Bengal, the tendency, however, for the present appears to be apward. With firmpess on the part of the large holders, it should improve from a native demand. The following may be taken as the raling prices :-New Patna, $545, cash; $5471, on credit to the untives; $5487, on time, of the loth sales to arrive 855 1; for the 11th sales | and $560, on ltime, 12th sales; these show a slight advance fou last quotations, and only can be lead from speculators hands; importers being altogether out of the market; New Benares, $520 to $5214. cash; Old Patria, 8515 to 8520, neglected; Malwa, $670, nominal, a few chests now and theu being placed on credit terms to the natival. The following fortnightly review of the markets, is from the Overland Trade Report of

The present review extends over a period of very nearly three weeks, in consequence of the change of the mensoon, and the necessary change in the departure of the mails. During this period the market for manufactured Imports has, with one exception, been rather dull, and the position of plain cottons is much the same as that reported Capt. Gardner, will be dispatched for the above. referred to is Yarn, for which article the market bas gradually strengthened under the influence of a speculative demand and gradually decreasing stocks until as high as $150 has been obtained for the best chop of No. 18-24. This count is particularly scarce, and the price is therefore proportionately higher than the other counts. Blocks are now very much reduced, and in the hands of unly one or two holders, who command the market There has been little interest displayed for plain Cottons, and the disproportion in price between Capt. Ashton; will leave for the above Ports. appear to attract the attention of doalers. Stocks are large and accumulating, and the chances of any improvement in price appears at present to be quite problematical." There is some improvement to be noticed for Woollens, and although prices are only a shade better, there has been considerable THE P. & O. S. N. Co.'s steamship' demand, as will be noticed from the sales given below. Fancy Cottons are still neglected . With dous in the present condition of affairs to speculate, but with the scarcity and consequent arrival of the English Mail. bugh price of the raw material, both here and at W. A brisk demand for either hand to mouth policy continues with dealers, together with a continual replanishment of stocks in the hands of Importers, there will be little elasticity in the market. Foreigners residing in Fau-ch eng would, however, have little to dread from the people. They are, though the reverse of servile, perfectly courteous, and seemed not averse to the possible residence of Europeans amongst them. It may bere be remarked, with regard to the question of residence o in the interior, that the Chinese do not seem very averse to such a course, and in man places through which I passed they almost appeared to welcome the idea. Those peop. who, under the indiscriminate title

The fact of this place being the terminus both of the land and water routes, naturally brings the question of locomotion before the. mind, and it may not be out of place ! venture to offer a few remarks here on many and great advantages the route along which I have been travelling offers for the construction of any future railway. A country city. for the most part level, or with hills of but slight importance, with but a single river, the Huang-ho, would offer any serious olatacle to engineering science; with coal in the hands of Chinese; with iron from the Hsi-shan, the mountains which border the route nearly all the way to Wei-hui-foo; with a country universally cultivated with the tenderest care, and rich in crops of millet, of corn, of corn, of beans, and in parts of cotton; and towns, only needing the invigorating and life-awakening presence of a railway to render their large and more opulent, it would be difficult to name any route combining so same. The whole having a frontage on the many selvantages. In travel ling long distances through a semi-civilized country, the traveller is in expectation of accidents, and thinks himself fortunate if he escapes robbery or maltreatment, and thoroughly makes up his mind to endure a large amount of annovance from the natives. He is of opinion that in a country destitute of railways and telegraphs, or some other equally rapid mode of communication, advantage will Co.'s Whart. be taken by the local authorities of their distance from the capital to hinder and extort money from him, and he will think himself fortunateif he is able to complete journey. But in my case in a journey at home I could not have suffered less hindrance or annovance. An intense curiosity and constant astonishment were everywhere visible; but no insults. no maltreatment, and, except in Southern Houan, good-humoured kindness were the universal characteristics.
